WoW on TV

Women of Wandsworth have been supporting our vulnerable elderly in local lodges in Battersea for 60 weeks, since the pandemic started. This was recognised by the wider community, but also by the TV networks.

We were shadowed by NTD TV this month to cover our 60th free food delivery to John Kirk lodge. NTD is a New York based global TV network functioning as an independent media outlet for free society. Their art and lifestyle programs celebrate the best of humanity's culture and traditions, as well as high moral standards and unparalleled cultural achievements. Thank you to reporter and journalist Jane Werell and cameraman Earl.

WoW Enterprise Club

WoW Enterprise club attended the Edge of the Box business workshop for start-up entrepreneurs, which is funded by Chelsea Foundation. Lots of topics were covered to help small businesses, but workshops were focusing on how to understand the data business is producing by using Google Analytics.

Analytics can help to understand your planned customer support and digital marketing strategy. This workshop helps to apply data-driven thinking to the business and to explore the questions customer data brings. At this event, we discovered tools we can use to access the insights into data answers, as well as how to understand your audience and learn how to use Google Analytics successfully to our small business advantage. Next month the business workshop will be on Sale-force and how to create a responsible business with advice on CSR, sustainability and responsibility, which is increasingly growing in importance to customers, our employees and society at large.

WoW in Lodges

Support for older people is an essential part of the countries' comprehensive response to the pandemic. During times of isolation and quarantine, older people need safe access to nutritious food, basic supplies, medicine to support their physical health and social care.

Lack of social support is associated with low level of physical and mental wellbeing, especially in vulnerable people, such as our elderly friends.

That is why WoW Mums did not give up on them during Covid 19, despite health risks to our own health. We delivered free food and fresh fruits and vegetables throughout these 60 weeks of pandemic to local lodges and sheltered housing in Battersea, with the help of our ardent volunteers.

It is lovely to see that all of them survived the worse and now they are all protected by vaccine.

WoW Masks Workshop

WoW Mums and Keeping Families Together (KFT) teamed up to organise the Face Masks Fashion Show, which will be filmed by Sandra Munoz Alvarez for our entry to Wandsworth Art Fringe Festival on 25th June. These workshops were organised after football Lions practice with Coach Denis Twumasi at East Hill Baptist church. CEO of KFT Deepika said: ' Don't wait until something happens to get help for your children or teenagers or for yourself, as Keeping Families Together and keeping young people in schools are here to support you and your children and teenagers through the toughest times. '

WoW Karate

WoW self defence classes have been going on for the last 11 years now and children have become more vigilant and able to protect themselves from bullies. Parents feel much safer letting them go to secondary school by themselves on public transport and walking home through dark streets in winter. Thank you to our partners and funders Thomas's Foundation.
